

The Harvest Fields

Spring 2015

Hello Partners, I hope this newsletter finds you all well and Anticipating the relief of spring. 2014 was an exceptional year for Compassion and here are some of the year end highlights.

The Agondoton school in the village has been blessed with a small grant from the U.S. Embassy in Benin. With it we were able to put in windows and doors and smooth some of the walls inside the classrooms. I praise God for this provision.

We have cleared the land adjacent to the new Calavi school building in Benin and have been using it for recess and recreation activities.

However the sweetest end of year memory was the farewell celebration the staff and friends in Benin gave me to show their appreciation and love for the time we've spent together over the past 8 years. They also gave me a beautiful gift with each of their pictures so I can remember to pray for them. It is a precious memento.

The foundational work is finished being laid in Benin and I am now on an extended furlough to refuel and to seek God for what He wants to do next in the world via Compassion. I left with a heart of peace and joy knowing the work is in good hands with Director Noel.

Haitian News

This past year's Caribbean Christmas Child Outreach was awesome. This year we had a combined team of Dr. Sabrina Black of Global Projects Ministries and my very own Pastors J Dykeman and Sandra Brown with members of Triumphant Faith International Worship Center.

The highlights of the outreach were a three day outdoor crusade, water baptism of new members of our new church and a pastor to pastor seminar designed for an attendance of 35 that turned into 62 men of God wanting and receiving encouragement in continuing their labors with the sheep of Haiti. There were seven souls saved over those seven days and that was Just Perfect! I thank you Lord.

I thank God for every milestone and progress the Lord has taken us in Haiti and Benin, but please know that the work continues in both nations and the needs are ever great and ever present. God and I continue to count on your faithfulness in your prayers and giving. I'm also trusting that many of you will reach out to me while I'm here in the States and I can connect or reconnect in ways I had not been able to do while serving on the field. May the Lord richly bless you all.

Working with my Father,
Brenda
